Local and General

Rev. J. P. Berry, will take for the subject of his address on Sunday evening "Youth." A welcome to all.

At McCool's, oats threshed out to 57 bushels to the acre. Stocks and Amery's outfit were on the job.

A. F. Smith got a new International Harvester Co.'s separator on Monday last, and is now at work threshing.

Bert Woledge and Jas. Moss went to Calgary on Monday and joined the 82nd, which is now rapidly filling up its ranks.

The W.A. will meet at the home of Mrs. McLeod, on Thursday afternoon, October 14th instead of Oct. 7th as planned. Sewing for the Red Cross Society.

Mr. E. S. McRory has received notice that he has been appointed Notary Public.

The Red Cross Sewing Circle of Inverleith invited the Sewing Circle from town to meet with them at the home of Mrs. J. S. Davie, on Wednesday afternoon. There was a good attendance, fine work and a pleasant time generally. Mrs. Davie made a delightful hostess.

Mrs. Robt. Colling entertained Ladies' Aid on Thursday. The men in town with the motor cars are to be commended for their generous services on such occasions.

A certain (know it all) gentleman of Crossfield whispered to another that Arnold couldn't buy Robin Hood Flour because he cut prices. To set him right and others, look at his advt.

The Rally Day Service of the Sunday School at the Union Church on Sunday was quite a success. The attendance in spite of the unfavorable weather was good. It is hoped that the attendance and interest will deepen as the winter season comes on.

The Moving Picture show at the Union Church on Monday evening was quite a success. The pictures were clear and well shown by an up to date machine which was supplied with electric light from a dynamo driven by his car engine. The film the Prowlers of the West which was shown in two reels, was a good picture. The war pictures gave an insight of what our boys are doing at the front, and the two comedy films were enjoyed by those present. Mr. L. T. English hopes to visit Crossfield again shortly with an change of programs.

Mr. Jos. Gunsolly and his outfit are threshing on Mr. L. Russell's farm, and threshed 2,100 bushels of oats off 20 and one fifth acres. The oats averaged 46 lbs. to the bushel. This must be acknowledged a very good crop of oats.

There was a gathering of a large portion of the future generation of Crossfield and their honored mothers at the home of our worthy Reeve, Mr. Sam Collins, on Thursday of last week. The celebration being the event of Mr. Collins' youngest child attaining his first birthday. Mr. W. G. B. Killroe was there and photographed the happy group.

Ed. Rach had his shoulder dislocated on Sunday last, he was out after some horses had got away, when near Capt. Wigle's, a cow charged the horse he was riding, causing it to stumble, and in the mixup Ed. received the injury.

PERSONALS.

Ontario Women.

Chatham, Ont.—"Some time ago I had a general breakdown. It terminated in quite a bad case. Dr. Pierce's treatment was recommended to me by a friend who used it and received great benefit. I have been taking it and in six months I was completely cured of all the ailments. I have never had any return of same. I can recommend this medicine as being good. If one will not have a fair trial."—Mrs. JOHN ACKERT, 67 Edgar St., Chatham, Ont.

"At the first symptoms of any derangement or ailment of life the one safe relief is to consult Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescriptions."

Thousands of women in Canada have tried it with uniformly good results.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a true friend to women in times of trial. For headache, backache, hot flashes, mental depression, dizziness, fainting and lassitude, as well as upon the skin, should never fail to take this tried and true woman's medicine.

Prepared from herbs, roots and leaves, containing no alcohol or narcotics, nor any harmful ingredient. In either tablet or liquid form. Write Dr. Pierce, invalids, Hotel Buffalo, N. Y., to-day for free specimen.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Polets not only the original but the best Little Litter Pill, first put up over 40 years ago by Dr. R. V. Pierce, have been much imitated but never equaled. They're entirely vegetable, being made up of concentrated and refined medicinal principles extracted from the roots of American herbs. Do not gripe. One or two for stomach corrective, three or four for cathartic.

A Long Walk.
He was a college professor, greatly beloved because of his kind heart, but with the common scholastic failing of being very absent minded. He visited many students, and when he paused for breath, the professor felt that he must say something. "What are you writing?" he asked, with every appearance of interest.

"Walk," cried the mother, indignantly. "Why, he's been walking now for five months."

"Dear me!" exclaimed the professor, with a relapsing into abstraction.

"What a long way he must have gone!"

Miller's Worm Powders will not only expel worms from the system, but will induce healthful conditions of the system under which worms can no longer live. Worms are a constant continual state of restlessness and pain, and there can be no comfort for the little ones until the cause of suffering is removed, which can easily be done by the use of these powders, than which there is nothing more effective.

"To what do you attribute your remarkable health?"

"I've replaced the very old gentileman. I've replaced a good start on most people by 'help' born before germs was discovered, thereby having less to worry about."

"Do you see that strong, healthy looking man over there?"

"I was just admiring his physique."

"The doctors gave him up years ago."

"You surprise me."

"Yes. They found they couldn't get anything out of him."

Scarcity of Butter

Canadian Exporters Have Chance to Make Profitable Deals, Says Trade Commissioner Ross

"Never before has there been such a favorable time for Canadian exporters," says D. H. Ross, the Canadian trade commissioner at Melbourne, in a letter to the trade and commerce department, in which he observes there are opportunities for Canadian exporters.

The export of butter from New Zealand is probably the largest, says Mr. Ross, and shipments of Canadian butter from Vancouver, and American butter from San Francisco, have been profitable. The import duty on the wholesale price for prime butter in Melbourne is now 18 cents per pound—an unprecedented value—and supports the market.

Both the mail and cargo steamers from Vancouver, and the cargo steamers from San Francisco have been arriving at Australian ports with full cargoes, and as a matter of interest, much more cargo of Canadian butter is offered than the steamers can accommodate. In some instances bulky goods have of necessity been diverted from the regular shipping lines to sailing vessels landing at New York.

Corn cribs the feet and make walking a torture, yet still relies on the simple H. H. Cow's Corn Cure, within reach of all.

Let Birds Alone

Albert, proudest of his hogs, was doing what he says was an unmanly act. He had a pen of hogs which he was fattening, and a flock of birds were continually attacking him; he supposed the grain he was feeding the swine. He bore his intrusion for a while but became so enraged that he seized a shotgun and upon his hog feed, he fired a load of shot into the flock in the pen, killing thirty birds. Then, upon casting his eyes upon the birds, he vomited their stomachs, then he vomited his own.

He then, however, cut up the grain, and fed the birds, and when he was asked, with every appearance of interest,

"Walk," cried the mother, indignantly. "Why, he's been walking now for five months."

"Dear me!" exclaimed the professor, with a relapsing into abstraction.

"What a long way he must have gone!"

Setting Fence Posts

Decay First Begins at Ground Line—
Larger End to be Placed Down

The Scientific American says: It is a very common belief among farmers that a post will last longer if set in the ground the reverse of the way it grew in the tree, always ascending or at least that it is easier for the sap to go up than down. Accordingly, one sees many posts, especially end and gate posts, with the top end down. The scientific fact is that sap in a tree always ascends or at least that it is easier for the sap to go up than down. Consequently, if a post is set with the top end down, tamps to prevent the rise of water, helps to keep the wood dry, and therefore renders it less liable to decay. Sap in a post set with the top end up, or top down, can flow in either direction with equal facility and the post is liable to decay to the contrary is supported.

Careful experiments on the relative durability of posts time have been made at the Ontario Agricultural Experiment Station and the above question was considered. One fence post, particularly common, 156 black locust posts, of which 86 were set with the top end up, 39 with the top end down and 31 did not show in any part of the ground. These set at 16 per cent, 30 or 39 years 39 posts or 19 per cent, were decayed. Of this 19 per cent, 11 were set with the top down and four undermined. In other words, one-third of those set top down rotted off, as compared with only a little over one-sixth those set up. From these numerous other observations the conclusion was reached that there is no difference which end is set in the ground, except that the smaller or larger end should be to the preference."

The decay of a post is mostly at the ground line, and it is there that the conditions as to air and moisture are most favorable to the development of rot-causing fungi. Other things being equal, the larger the post the longer it will last. Inventing a post often means putting the end in the ground, and this is done the time required to rot off is less than where the big end is down. If both ends are equally sound, a large end should be to the ground. If one end is defective it should be up, since the conditions above ground are many times more favorable to durability than just at or below the ground line.

CHILDHOOD DANGERS

No symptoms that indicate any of the ills of childhood should be allowed to pass without prompt attention. The little ailment may soon become a serious one. The Tablets can be given to the new-born babe as well as the growing child. Thousands of mothers now use this safe medicine for their children. The tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from Dr. Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A clergyman had taught an old man in his parish to read, and found him an apt pupil. Calling at the cottage soon after he found only the wife at home.

"How's John?" asked he.

"He is well, thank you," said his wife.

"How does he get on with his reading?"

"Nicely, sir."

"I suppose he can read his Bible comfortably now?"

"Bible sir! Bless you, he was out of the Bible and into the sporting paper again."

Red Cross Notes.

The annual meeting of the Crossfield Red Cross Society took place in the Fire Hall, on Friday afternoon, October 1st, at 3 o'clock. Thirteen members were present.

After the minutes had been read and adopted the financial report for the year was brought before the society and was accepted.

The following officers were elected for the next twelve months.

President, Mrs. McRory.

Vice-President, Mrs. Berry.

Sec.-Treas., Mrs. Wm. Laut.

Committee, Mesdames Halliday,

Willis, Mossop, Merrick Thomas, and Edwards.

For the benefit of those who were not present the financial report and also the report of work done is given below:

The following have paid their fees, Mesdames Edwards, W. McRory, M. Thomas, W. Laut, Woleidge, F. Laut, Mossop, Jessiman, Lewis, Purvis, Ontkes, Berry and McLeod, and are re-enrolled as members for the new year.

Those who were not at the meeting are urged to pay their membership fees as soon as possible, as every $2 added to the funds makes it more possible for the committee to get materials and help in the different branches of the great work.

A balance of $50.78, which sum was handed over to the Provincial Society this week to aid in buying medical supplies. It will be seen from this that the Society are beginning another year with no funds to their credit, excepting the membership fees.

The Paris of Russia Had Checked Career

Lost by Poles in a Three Days' Battle

Prince of Poland of Warsaw, who was first to get into Warsaw, who was a field marshal in the German army. He is a son-in-law of the Emperor of Austria, brother of King Louis of Bavaria, and uncle of the Prince of Rupert, who is styled the "Prince of Wales" by the English Jacobites. The chief town of Poland stands on the left bank of the Vistula with its suburb, Praga, on the right bank, reached by three iron bridges. Warsaw had a population of 700,000, but at least 200,000 of its inhabitants had departed at last reports.

The capture of Warsaw by the Germans was a catastrophe, marking a century of Russian domination of the Polish capital, sometimes referred to as the "Paris of Russia." Warsaw is the second city of Poland in importance as to the residence of the Dukes of Masovia in the Middle Ages. It became the capital of Poland early in the sixteenth century, and the planting, Cracow, which Cracow remained the Polish coronation city.

The last Polish king died in a great three days' battle in July, 1656, when the forces of Charles X. of Sweden conquered the city, the Swedes driving the last of the Polish out of Poland.

General Botha had made a new African Map

On his return to his Town from South-West Germany to the empire, General Botha was received with gratitude and universal admiration.

The festivities held in his honor culminated in a civic banquet, at which men of both races united to the former Emperor of Germany.

In his reply, the great soldier-statesman dwelt on the far-reaching character of the German empire.

They reckoned on Boer help to overthrow the Union, and guard the frontier, and the independence of the former Republics in return for an immediate and successful rebellion.

Maps have been discovered recasting the chart of Africa on the basis that peace would be signed in Rome in 1916, and the whole of Africa south of the Equator will be "Greater Germany."

General Botha, to the high delight of the Boers, said that the last minute fragment of territory had been reserved, labelled "Boer reserve."

He told, further, that the evidence he had found of the sufferings of the Herero under German rule had made a profound and irreparable impression on him, and "I can assure you," he added, "that the natives regarded our arrival as a deliverance from one of the greatest afflictions today." While only one child had been murdered by the Herero during their rebellion, the Germans had lost 1,000.

General Smuts carried with him the assent of the whole empire when he said, "If German South West Africa is not held firmly by the Union, the day will come when the Union will belong to Germany." Let us hope that the Boers will not let us down," he added, "and make that known all over the world."

Botha Changed the Plans

The Germans Had Made a New African Map

On his return to his Town from South-West Germany to the empire, General Botha was received with gratitude and universal admiration.

The festivities held in his honor culminated in a civic banquet, at which men of both races united to the former Emperor of Germany.

Digging Up Buried Cities

Excavating in Far East Reveal Cities Buried for Centuries

Dr. Frederick Biles, of Rochester University, is to return to his former work of excavation and exploration in Palestine. Being asked how he would proceed there to find a promising site for excavation, Dr. Biles said: "I have been through the lands of the Orient, and countless mounds of the ancient cities of the East, and the caravan traveller would find hard to distinguish from ordinary hills of sand or stones.

On the way, while the caravan was resting, the caravan master would drop a few choice handfuls of wheat, barley, etc.

Canadians are Economizing

Large Decrease in the Use of Spirits, Cigars, Cigarettes

The national thirst engendered of the war and the scarcity of spending money, however, have combined to make Canadians smoke and drink less. The figures of the inland revenue department of liquor and tobacco for the last fiscal year show a considerable drop from the preceding year.

There were 2,000,000,000 dollars worth of tobacco and 1,000,000,000 dollars worth of liquor produced in Canada in 1913-14.

But even with the decreased consumption of tobacco, there are 1,000,000,000 dollars worth of tobacco produced in Canada.

The per capita consumption of tobacco in 1913-14 is 170,000,000 dollars, compared with 200,000,000 dollars in 1912-13.

The per capita consumption of liquor in 1913-14 is 150,000,000 dollars, compared with 180,000,000 dollars in 1912-13.

The per capita consumption of spirits in 1913-14 is 120,000,000 dollars, compared with 150,000,000 dollars in 1912-13.

The per capita consumption of beer last year was 1,750,000,000 dollars, compared with 1,900,000,000 dollars in 1912-13.

The per capita consumption of whisky in 1913-14 is 1,000,000,000 dollars, compared with 1,200,000,000 dollars in 1912-13.

CHEW "PAY ROLL" TOBACCO

A BRIGHT TOBACCO OF THE FINEST QUALITY

10 CENTS PER PLUG

The Mystery of the Ravenspurs

By Fred M. White

Ward, Lock & Co. Limited
London, Melbourne and Toronto

"These four men are dead—and that is an end of it," he said. "What can it matter whether there is an interest held on them or not? If it is, then there will be an end of my service to you. You will be the only future happiness of the family dependent upon it. It is also of the utmost importance that Princess Zara does not know of the death of her miscreants."

Geoffrey nodded. He began to say daily, "And all the excitement of these bodies is over!"

"What do you say, Uncle Ralph?" he asked.

"So that Tchigorsky is right," Ralph croaked; "Tchigorsky is always right. When we get Voski's body, what shall we do with it?"

"Let us go to the coroner, where I can get a look at it," said Tchigorsky. "For the present I do not exist—at least, as far as this house is concerned. And you have to do is to follow my directions."

The strong pair sat on their excursion. Up the hill, across the valley, a long pull from the village to the chateau, but it was accomplished at length.

The body was laid again at the least dangerous part of the Rue de la Frey set out along the sands. The former's step was free and assured as that of his younger companion.

"All right," he cried, "you are right. There they are," said Ralph.

"It is well," Ralph replied. "The three men lay side by side as if they had been placed so by human hands."

As far as Geoffrey could judge, there were no signs of violence on the bodies, either of the men or themselves. They lay by each other, their faces transfixed with rage and horror.

Beyond doubt these men had been dismembered down to the strong current and then cast up again by the sea as if in cruel sport.

"No hurts on either," Geoffrey muttered. "It is possible. Look at the other one."

Geoffrey did so. He saw a face fixed with a grim smile, the smile of the man who can meet death and know how to pass it. Those who had seen him told Geoffrey that Tchigorsky and Ralph Ravenspurs; indeed, with its tragic disfigurement the dead Russian would have passed for Tchigorsky.

The face was black and swollen from the salt water of the forested Had not he known the truth and had any one told Geoffrey that Tchigorsky lay there, he would have believed it.

A spade had been pried in the bottom of the boat, and with it two deep graves were dug in the sand. Into the bodies of the men the sand was cast; the sand was made smooth again and a layer of heavy rocks laid on top. The body of the Russian was conveyed to the boat and then to the house.

There was no time to go to the police station. The family were on the terrace. A startled servant or two came forward and gave the necessary assistance to convey the body to the dining-room.

"Go to the village and fetch the constable," said Geoffrey. "We have found a body in the boat."

The servant went off, the gallery was deserted. In a few minutes the family would be in the house again, and the secret of the foreigner's hideout would be known.

"It is very like you," said Geoffrey. "You are a real detective. Your idea is that I fell over the cliffs in the darkness and was drowned. I will explain later. You may consider."

Then the servant of Marion appeared. She looked white and agitated.

"Another horror," she said. "Sims just told me. Who is it?"

"I regret to say it is Dr. Tchigorsky," said Ralph. "He must have walked over the cliff in the darkness. See here."

Geoffrey bent over the body with a shudder.

"Poor fellow," she said tenderly. "Tchigorsky beyond a doubt."

Ralph turned away, as if in grief but the grin on his face was the grin of Mephistopheles.

CHAPTER XXXV.

Geoffrey was ready to confess that he couldn't quite follow. He turned to Ralph, who once more had recovered his old expression—an expression tinged with profound regret. From the tones of Rupert Ravenspur demanding to know what it was all about.

"Go and tell your master that I am here," he said. "Everybody who comes near us is fated, it seems. Poor Tchigorsky is no more. He was a mysterious man, and wonderful, remarkable in his ways, but he was the most interesting man I ever met. But I shall never hear anything more about him."

"He was a very old friend of yours," Marion asked.

"Not so very old," Ralph replied. "We were mutually interested, in certain scientific matters. But as to the marvellous side of things he told me nothing."

Speaking by the letter that was perfectly correct, Tchigorsky had told Ralph nothing, for the simple reason that he had learnt and suffered together.

"Then why did he come here?" Marion asked.

"To try to solve the mystery. He declared that Orientalism was at the bottom of it. But we shall never know why Tchigorsky is no more. I have some knowledge as he may have possessed has gone down to the sea with him."

Mariam turned away with a sigh. Slight as their acquaintance had been, she had been drawn to Tchigorsky, she said. Strange that whoever tried to help the body of a man of Ravenspur should come under the ban of death.

"But Tchigorsky was drowned," said Ralph.

"No, indeed," Marion replied. "Oh, I know there are no signs of violence on the body. I know how dangerous these waters are, and how dangerous the sea is to sailors. But I have my opinions all the same."

"You are wrong in this case," Ralph said, as he walked away.

Presently the sound began to arrive. For the first time for many years, Ravenspur was invaded by foreign pirates. The Black Fleet of barbary acts had come to the British port, including a journey with a colleague, publisher, everywhere. They would have overruled Rupert Ravenspur, if he had not told him of his eyes even then.

The police let Ralph alone but Geoffrey was subjected to severe questioning. The whole town came out of its doors faster than ever, and the police officer better than Ralph had anticipated.

Mariam turned away with a sigh. Slight as their acquaintance had been, she had been drawn to Tchigorsky, she said. Strange that whoever tried to help the body of a man of Ravenspur should come under the ban of death.

"But Tchigorsky was drowned," said Ralph.

"No, indeed," Marion replied. "Oh, I know there are no signs of violence on the body. I know how dangerous these waters are, and how dangerous the sea is to sailors. But I have my opinions all the same."

"You are wrong in this case," Ralph said, as he walked away.

Presently the sound began to arrive. For the first time for many years, Ravenspur was invaded by foreign pirates. The Black Fleet of barbary acts had come to the British port, including a journey with a colleague, publisher, everywhere. They would have overruled Rupert Ravenspur, if he had not told him of his eyes even then.

The police let Ralph alone but Geoffrey was subjected to severe questioning. The whole town came out of its doors faster than ever, and the police officer better than Ralph had anticipated.

Beyond doubt these men had been dismembered down to the strong current and then cast up again by the sea as if in cruel sport.

"No hurts on either," Geoffrey muttered. "It is possible. Look at the other one."

Geoffrey did so. He saw a face fixed with a grim smile, the smile of the man who can meet death and know how to pass it. Those who had seen him told Geoffrey that Tchigorsky and Ralph Ravenspurs; indeed, with its tragic disfigurement the dead Russian would have passed for Tchigorsky.

The face was black and swollen from the salt water of the forested Had not he known the truth and had any one told Geoffrey that Tchigorsky lay there, he would have believed it.

A spade had been pried in the bottom of the boat, and with it two deep graves were dug in the sand. Into the bodies of the men the sand was cast; the sand was made smooth again and a layer of heavy rocks laid on top. The body of the Russian was conveyed to the boat and then to the house.

There was no time to go to the police station. The family were on the terrace. A startled servant or two came forward and gave the necessary assistance to convey the body to the dining-room.

"Go to the village and fetch the constable," said Geoffrey. "We have found a body in the boat."

The servant went off, the gallery was deserted. In a few minutes the family would be in the house again, and the secret of the foreigner's hideout would be known.

"It is very like you," said Geoffrey. "You are a real detective. Your idea is that I fell over the cliffs in the darkness and was drowned. I will explain later. You may consider."

Then the servant of Marion appeared. She looked white and agitated.

"Another horror," she said. "Sims just told me. Who is it?"

"I regret to say it is Dr. Tchigorsky," said Ralph. "He must have walked over the cliff in the darkness. See here."

Geoffrey bent over the body with a shudder.

"Poor fellow," she said tenderly. "Tchigorsky beyond a doubt."

Ralph turned away, as if in grief but the grin on his face was the grin of Mephistopheles.

he couldn't quite follow. He turned to Ralph, who once more had recovered his old expression—an expression tinged with profound regret. From the tones of Rupert Ravenspur demanding to know what it was all about.

"Go and tell your master that I am here," he said. "Everybody who comes near us is fated, it seems. Poor Tchigorsky is no more. He was a mysterious man, and wonderful, remarkable in his ways, but he was the most interesting man I ever met. But I shall never hear anything more about him."

"He was a very old friend of yours," Marion asked.

"Not so very old," Ralph replied. "We were mutually interested, in certain scientific matters. But as to the marvellous side of things he told me nothing."

Speaking by the letter that was perfectly correct, Tchigorsky had told Ralph nothing, for the simple reason that he had learnt and suffered together.

"Then why did he come here?" Marion asked.

"To try to solve the mystery. He declared that Orientalism was at the bottom of it. But we shall never know why Tchigorsky is no more. I have some knowledge as he may have possessed has gone down to the sea with him."

ROBERT WHITEFIELD,

PRINTER AND PUBLISHER.

CROSSFIELD, Alta., OCT. 8, 1915.

Rev. C. H. Huestis, Secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, made a short visit to Crossfield this week. Mr. Huestis stated to the Chronicle that he was of the opinion that in no province was there a better observance of the Sunday law than in Alberta. Referring to conditions in the farming district during the recent harvest, Mr. Huestis said that practically no complaints of Sunday work had come to him from the older settled parts. There was, however, a considerable number of instances along lines of railway recently opened up, and also in some districts in the southern part of the province. Most of those were on the part of new settlers. They had been warned of the consequences of their action. It was not the policy of the Alliance to advise prosecutions of a first offence, nor where there was an evident necessity. With reference to Sunday threshing Mr. Huestis stated that the Attorney General had recently expressed to him his determination to repress such infraction of the law by the prosecution of offenders, when such cases were reported to him.

Stock Inspection.

Stock Drovers, Dealers and Shippers Must Produce Evidence of Ownership.

The new Stock Inspection Act requires that when stock is offered for shipment to a point outside of the province, the same must be inspected for brands, and the shipper must either own the brand that is on the animals or he must have a memorandum of sale signed by such owner. If the animal is unbranded, the seller must state in his memorandum how he acquired the animal that is offered for shipment.

Animals sold at a sale-yard or sale or exchange, or at stock yard or auction, must be inspected before payment thereof is made, as must also animals sold on a farm or at the private stable of the seller, unless they have been on the premises for at least thirty days.

If a farmer raises a horse or cow and sells it at the farm, no inspection is required. If he brings it into town and sells it, it then must be inspected, because it has not been on the premises where sold for thirty days.

If a resident in a town or city and keeps a horse or cow, and sells it, and if he has owned it for more than thirty days, sell it without inspection. If he keeps it in a livery and stable, or if he takes it there to be sold, it must be inspected for brands, and the proof of ownership must be established before it can be taken away or payment therefor accepted.
